

As a (very) frequent flier and a business man who relies heavily on cell phones, I urge the FCC to NOT ALLOW the use of cell phones while an aircraft is in the air. Without commenting on technical issues and risks, which I know little about, I must state that the use of cell phones in the air further the already high level of discomfort and anxiety already suffered by air travelers. Todays aircraft are flying with increased passenger loads and more seats per plane, and passengers comfort level has suffered. I would never consider using my cell phone, and forcing fellow travelers to listen to my conversation, in such conditions. Please do not add to the loss of civility by allowing the use of cell phones while airborne.
